2023 News Organization of the Year Awards Announced by PNA Foundation

HARRISBURG, Pa., August 17, 2023 – The Pennsylvania NewsMedia Association Foundation has announced its 2023 News Organization of the Year Awards, recognizing PA news companies for overall excellence across all departments.

For multi-day publications, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, is recognized with first place honors while The Times-Tribune, Scranton, receives second place. TheBurg, Harrisburg, receives first place for weeklies while the Chestnut Hill Local earns second place honors.

Nearly 120 news organizations from across Pennsylvania competed for NOY Awards throughout the year by entering both the Keystone Media Awards and the PNA Foundation Advertising Contest. Points were awarded and accumulated through these contests as well as several special awards. While these contests were divided across categories and circulation divisions, NOY recognition is determined by the highest accumulated points across all categories and divisions. News organizations are judged not only on their journalism and writing, reporting, photography, video, digital products and design. But, also their sales strategies, innovation, community impact and their relevance, integrity and initiative in serving readers and audiences.

Awards will be presented on Nov. 1, as part of the Keystone Media Awards Brunch to be held in conjunction with the News Media Business Summit at the Sheraton Harrisburg Hershey Hotel.
